LOCAL REALTORS BUY VALUABLE PROPERTY

J. J. Fahey and C. B. Rich, of the real estate firm of Fahey & Rich, have again shown their faith in the future of Daly City, and have acted upon the advice they invariably give in answer to the query: "Is Daly City a good place to invest your capital?"

Messrs. Fahey and Rich have purchased the two story business block at 6276 Mission street, formerly belonging to Nick Manno, of the Sunset district, paying a goodly sum for this property, but believe they have made an investment that will ultimately yield a rich return.

This property has long been known as Eagles' Hall, being formerly occupied by Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

There is a large store room on the ground floor, and the second story contains, besides the commodious hall, several office rooms.

Following their purchase of this excellent centrally located building, the new owners have had an army of painters and decorators at work, and the building is being placed in excellent condition for the tenants.

The lodge room has again been leased to Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles, and when the improvements are completed and the lodge takes possession, they will have one of the neatest and most comfortable lodge rooms on the peninsula. The Native Sons will also hold their meetings in this hall.

It is probable that the store room will be leased in a few days to an enterprising firm, while it is understood the office rooms will be occupied soon after the decorators have completed their work.

PAGEANT IS PRESENTED AT GRACE PRESBYTERIAN

Last Sunday evening Grace Presbyterian church was well filled for the pageant of the Ten Virgins, and the sermon on "Lost Opportunities," from I Kings, 20-24. Rev. Gatchell said: "People are passing through life seeing only the money getting, and losing the joys, fellowships and the beauties of God's great world. Men lose the joys of the home by being so engrossed in the things of this world, and the five foolish virgins missed the marriage by negligence and thoughtlessness."

The race started off with a real vim, with the best attendance in the Sabbath school for three years. You will enjoy the interest. Come and get in on the start.

The boys' club met Monday at 3:45 with a splendid attendance and interest.

The girls' club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Gatch ll, and a good and profitable time was had.

Rev. Gatchell will give a sermon-lecture next Sabbath evening at Elvarado, and Rev. McElhenny, of Centerville, California, will give the address at Grace church, and the public is urged to come out and hear him. Special music is being planned.

GERMAN SINGERS PRESENT AN EXCELLENT PROGRAM

The program presented at the Jefferson Union high school auditorium last Friday evening by the Freundschaft Liederkranz chorus, under the direction of Prof. Arthur Leuis, was most enthusiastically received and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, and this organization of singers is assured of a crowded house at any time they decide to present another program in Daly City.

The program included Schaefers Sonntagslied (The Day of the Lord); Der Wald (The Forest); Lutzow's Wilde Jagd (Hunter's Song); and Old Black Joe. Each number was enthusiastically applauded, the large crowd thoroughly enjoying every moment of this excellent musical entertainment.

Following the program the members of the chorus were served refreshments at the Relish by William Haerdter, a member of the chorus.

An interesting experiment was made with the moving pictures following the program. Once again were viewed those cinema triumphs of 1910 and 1912. Truly they were wonders in those days! One can only appreciate the present day motion picture photoplay with its excellent plot, fine actors and faultless photography by comparison with such a "humdinger" of past years.

Redwood City to Have New School

Redwood City is to have a new twenty-four room school building of the latest and best fireproof construction at an estimated cost of $190,000, it was decided at a joint meeting of the school trusteees and citizens.

WITHDRAWS OPPOSITION TO WIDENING OF HIGHWAY

The set-back that the plan to widen the highway passing through the cemetery section received last week seems to have been only temporary. Guaranteed a grade crossing into their property, the directors of the Cypress Lawn Cemetery Association have agreed to turn over to the city and state a strip of property along the cemetery territory, sufficient to permit widening of the peninsula highway twenty-four feet.

At a meeting in the cemetery office on Wednesday, attended by officials of San Francisco, the cemeteries and the State Highway Commission, this compromise plan was agreed upon.

The opposition to the widening of the "bottle neck," by the Cypress Lawn Cemetery Association, as expressed by H. H. Noble, president of the association, at a meeting last week, arose from the fact that no provision had been made for an entrance to the cemetery. The stand taken by Mr. Noble at the "Let's Go" meeting in San Francisco last week came as a surprise, and for a time it was thought the widening of the highway would have to be abandoned.

Officials of the Highway Commission have agreed to take under consideration plans for providing the grade crossing and eliminating the cemetery officials' objections thereby.

The cemetery association will, it is understood, donate 24 feet from the front of its property from the cross-road leading from the Chinese cemetery to Collingswood avenue.

Supervisor Welch, a member of the San Francisco supervisors' committee, said the matter would be taken under final consideration and some definite action taken within two weeks.

COUNTY GROCERS HOLD MEETING AT COUNTY SEAT

The San Mateo County Retail Grocers' Association, of which Hugo Bettleheim, of San Mateo, is president, met at Redwood City last Monday night for a discussion of stores that keep open nights and Sundays. The matter was turned over to the grievance committee, with instructions to report back at the next meeting.

PLANS NEW HOMES NEAR HIGH SCHOOL

Another move in the development of Daly City and Colma is announced in the changing of hands of the property just south of the Jefferson Union high school.

It is understood that the acreage just south of the high school, bounded by Mission street and the railroad tracts, with the exception of the corner block owned by the Edwards Company, has been sold to J. P. Barnes, of Los Angeles, and Dr. Dixon, of Seattle, Washington.

The new owners will, it is understood, place this property in shape to put on the market. Streets, sidewalks and sewers are to be installed, and it is expected that a number of houses will be built, the work to begin in March. The Mission street frontage, however, will be held for business purposes.

The enterprise will mean an investment of over a quarter of a million dollars.

A number of homes are to be built on this ideal location, which will mean a substantial increase in the population of Daly City and Colma.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW STEADY GROWTH OF CITY

The following building permits have been issued during February to date:

E. J. Hargrave, store and five rooms.

Griggs & Henderson, five rooms and garage.

S. C. Peterson, two homes, each four rooms and garage.

C. Rolff, store and three flats.

Geo. W. Grither, four rooms and garage.

Walter F Hughes, four rooms and garage.

Dave Campbell, two homes, each five rooms and garage.

Aged Pioneer Woman Dies

Mrs. Johanna T. Quinlan, one of the best known pioneers of San Mateo county, died February 4 at her home in Half Moon Bay, at the age of 82, having resided in the Half Moon Bay district for fifty-eight years.

ACCEPTS FIRST UNIT OF BAY SHORE ROAD

The State Highway Commission has officially accepted the grading of the first unit of the Bay Shore highway, completed three weeks ago. This unit stretches from South San Francisco to Burlingame, a distance of five and two-tenths miles, and the construction of ten bridges was necessary for the completion of the work.

While the grading of the road has been completed and accepted, the highway will not be open to traffic for several months, it is said.

The grading was completed after approximately sixteen months of labor and at a cost of $450,000, and brings to reality the dream of aiding in the smashing of the "bottle neck" of the Peninsula near Colma. The contractors were D. A. Foley & Co., of Los Angels.

When the Bay Shore highway is finally thrown open to traffic, it will furnish a new traffic artery for the entire peninsula that will materially reduce the time of travel between the principal points of the peninsula section.

CONTRACTORS GRANTED EXTENSION OF TIME

At the meeting of the city trustees held last Monday evening in the City Hall, Eaton & Smith, contractors, petitioned the board for an extension of time of ninety days for the completion of the street work on Bellevue avenue, and the petition was granted.

Two other petitions were received, one in favor of allowing the erection of hot-houses at 221 South Park avenue, and the other against the erection. It was decided to refuse permission for such erection.

A map of the new Jefferson Park Tract being opened just below the Jefferson Union high school tract was submitted for approval.

Redwood Man Ends Own Life

Thowald Hansen, aged 60, a Redwood City gardener, committed suicide last Saturday night by sending a bullet crashing through his brain. He had been in ill health for some time.

VETERAN FIREMEN FORM PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

The veteran firemen of Daly City met on Friday evening, February 5, in the assembly room of the City Hall and formed a permanent organization.

The Association was organized for the purpose of perpetuating the sociability, the frindship and good fellowship which have been known to exist among the members of the fire department of this community.

Thirty-three members were enrolled as charter members, including one of the oldest pioneer firemen here, Dr. R. R. Castle. The charter roll will remain open until next meeting, to enable those men to sign who were unable to attend the initial meeting. Regrets were expressed for Julius Nelson, an enthusiastic and well known pioneer fireman, who was unable to attend and sign the roll on account of severe illness. He has been bedridden for the past few months.

The following officers were elected: Fritz Hanson, president; Wm. Regan, first vice-president; A. J. Green, second vice-president; Edward J. Ford, recording and financial secretary; Alfred Romer, treasurer; H. W. A. Rickman, marshal; Arthur Bodien, Dr. R. R. Castle, F. W. Schmidt, J. J. Kennedy and H. F. Secor, board of directors.

F. W. Schmidt was appointed historian of the Association, and assigned the duty of compiling and retaining, for the use of the organization, the history and the various progress of the fire department from the days of Vista Grande.

The initiation fee was set at 50 cents, and the dues at 25 cents per month.

The temporary meeting hall will be the assembly room at the City Hall, until permanent quarters can be established. Meetings will be held the first Friday of each month, the next meeting to be on Friday evening, March 5, at 8 o'clock.

Several sections of the by-laws were adopted as submitted by the committee, and a new by-laws committee appointed, consisting of H. F. Secor, A. J. Green and Ed J. Ford, to work out further details.

It is the desire of this Association to inform all firement who are eligible to join to show their interest by being present at the next meeting.

LINCOLN PROGRAM AT THE LOCAL METHODIST CHURCH

"Abraham Lincoln" was the subject of the sermon at the local Methodist church last Sunday evening. A motion picture was shown during the first part of the service. Mr. McClintic said in part: "Abraham Lincoln's greatness consisted not in his wealth, his culture, his clothes, his possessions, but in his moral character, his broad good common sense, his gentleness and forbearance so far as his personal feelings were concerned, his hatred of cruelty, or dishonesty, or injustice, and finally in his great loving heart." Mr. McClintic spent the last twenty minutes of the hour in giving a reading of parts of the play, "Abraham Lincoln," by John Drinkwater.

Mrs. D. T. Bentley sang a beautiful solo, based on the Shepherd Psalm. The choir helped greatly in the music.

"The Larger Faith" will be the subject of the sermon for next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. There will be special music.

The Ladies Aid met at the home of the president, Mrs. Leonard McKee, on Thursday afternoon and enjoyed a delightful social hour Plans were made for the anniversary dinner and entertainment which is to be given at the church on Friday evening, February 26, at 6:45. Tickets are 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children. The program will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Waltz, Jr., of San Jose, soprano and baritone solists.

The Sunday school is enjoying a spirited contest. The school will have charge of the evening service on the first Sunday evening in March.

Mr. McClintic has announced that there will be an illustrated lecture-sermon on Sunday evening, February 21, at 7:30. The title of the lecture is "English Shrines"—or "How Christianity Came to Our Forefathers."

PLAN DINNER-DANCE

El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, has arranged for a dinner-dance for its members to be held at the Lido Cafe, in San Francisco, on Tuesday evening, February 25. This event will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of the organization of the Parlor. Plans will be completed at the next regular meeting, which will take place on Wednesday evening, February 17, in Masonic Hall, Daly City, at 8 o'clock sharp.

NEW DRY ORDINANCE APPROVED BY BOA

San Mateo county's new dry ordinance, commonly called the soft drink ordinance, drawn by District Attorney Franklin Swart and presented by him in person at the meeting of the board of supervisors on Monday at Redwood City, was adopted.

The ordinance went through as first drafted by Attorney Swart, with the exception of a clause providing that all places which dispensed soft drinks be kept closed between the hours of 1 and 6 o'clock in the morning. This section was vigorously opposed by Supervisor Thompson, who pointed out that it would work a hardship on the various all night restaurants in the county who, besides conducting eating places, also dispensed soft drinks. Legitimate all night restaurants were exempted from the provisions of the new dry act calling for all places dispensing soft drinks to remain closed between the proscribed hours of between 1 and 6 o'clock in the morning.

Some of the outstanding provisions of the new county wide dry law provide that proprietors of soft drink parlors must keep the doors of their establishments open at all times during business hours.

Soft drink establishment proprietors must agree to permit the sheriff or any deputy to walk through and inspect the premises at any time during business hours.

Before licenses for soft drink parlors are granted, the applicant must make a written application ten days before his personal appearance before the supervisors. He must outline the exact nature of his business, specify the exact hours which he will keep open, and state specifically and categorically what he will offer for sale.

District Attoreny Swart told the members of the board that so far as he could discover, in person, and so far as the sheriff could discover, in person, on personal visits, there were very few places in the county that dispensed illicit liquor for beverage purposes on the premises.

TO CONTINUE SURVEY FOR BAY SHORE ROAD

The use of $25,000 for a continuation of surveys on the Bay Shore highway on sections from Broadway station, Burlingame, to San Mateo was authorized Tuesday by the California Highway Commission, it was announced by Chairman Harvey M. Toy, following a meeting of the commission.

At the same time the commission accepted as completed the contract of D. A. Foley and Company, of Los Angeles, for the grading of the first section of the Bay Shore route, extending from South San Francisco to Broadway station, about 5.2 miles. A grade sixty feet in width has been completed across the tide flats on this section, the highway having been projected on an almost straight line along the shore.

The funds for the survey work will come from the highway general fund, which was created by the original Bay Shore highway act of 1923, and into which the city of San Francisco has paid $500,000 as authorized by the legislature, highway officials explained.

Continuation of surveys will definitely establish the route of the highway and facilitate the securing of rights-of-way which are necessary before further construction can be undertaken.

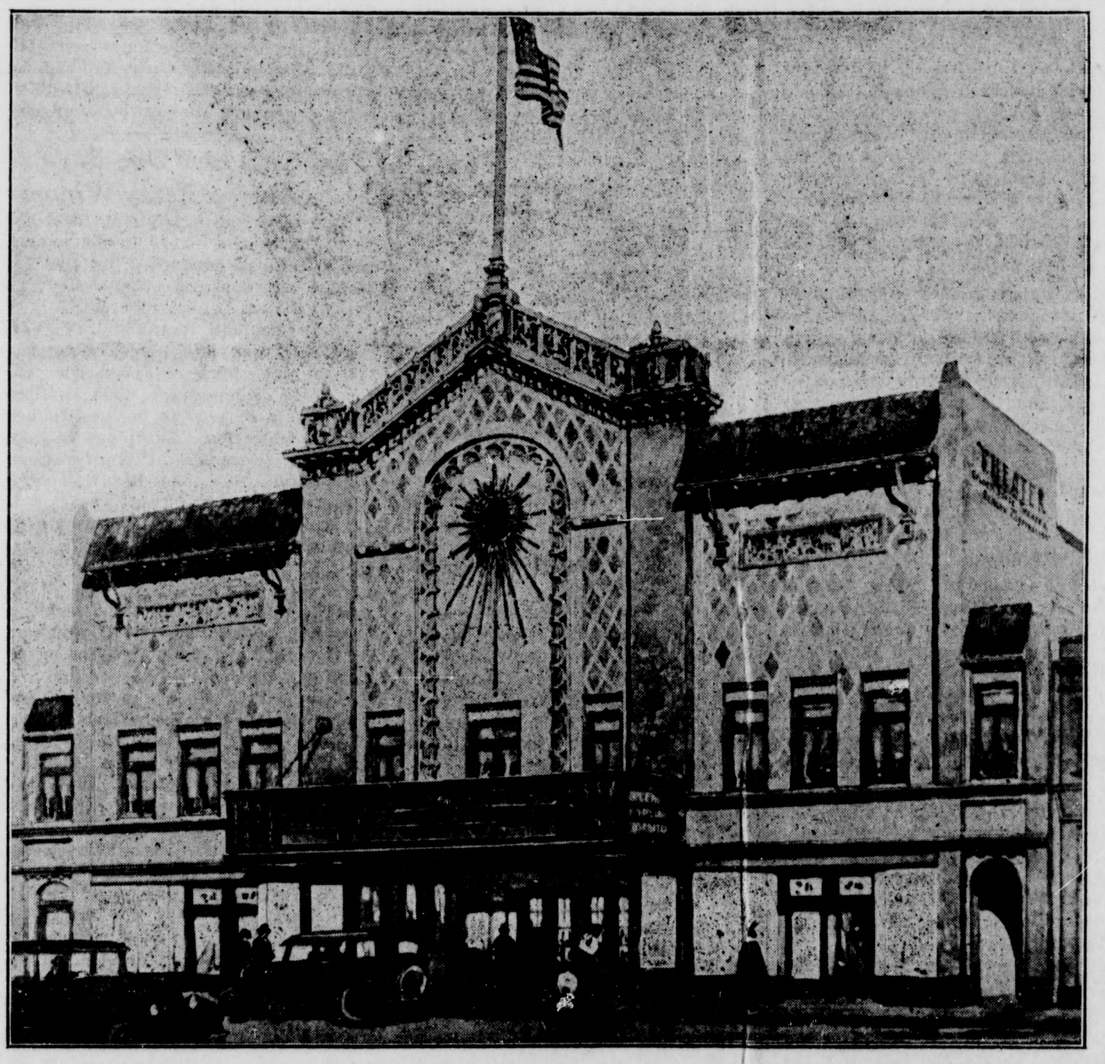
HILLSIDE BOULEVARD NEARING COMPLETION

The new Hillside boulevard, which is destined to connect Daly City with South San Francisco and provide a short cut from the peninsula directly into the Mission district of San Francisco, probably will be completed by spring, despite the delays caused by the recent heavy rains.

A portion of the road out of Daly City is ready now, and the construction work on the remaining portion is being rushed so that the thoroughfare can be thrown open to the motorists and thus aid in breaking the condition of traffic congestion caused by the narrow roadway through the cemetery section.

The new boulevard skirts San Bruno mountain and passes through Paradise valley. It will eliminate the necessity of using the highway through the cemeteries. A portion of the road follows the old stage line which connected San Francisco with San Jose.

Grand Opening of New State Theatre



All indications point to an evening long to be remembered in this section this Friday evening, when the New State Theatre, built by the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation, will throw open its doors to the public at 6:15.

Nothing has been left undone nor neglected in providing every comfort and convenience for the patrons of this new theatre. The interior of the building has been beautifully decorated and great credit is due G. Lagomarsino, who was the contractor in charge of the construction of the building. The organ that has just been installed is considered to be one of the finest in the city.

Mr. William Moore, who has been for several years manager of the Excelsior Theatre, will also act as manager of the New State Theatre. He promises the people of the surrounding district the very best in motion pictures, and in conjunction with the movies there will be high class vaudeville.

For the opening night the picture to be shown will be Constance Talmage in "Her Sister From Paris," assisted by Roland Colman.

GH Hopeful and Least Redeeming Features of American Civilization

By EDGAR LEE MASTERS, in New York Times.

THE most hopeful feature of American civilization is its effort to get away from unreality, which in twenty-five years has done away with oratory and brought in its stead the simple speech of men who have something to say; and above this has placed poetry, is beauty and truth, austerely and authentically expressed; and inging this gift of a new era has done away with words which are sound and the schools where they were taught.

It is this tendency which has made the theater a place of sure-footed ination; and has brought wholesomeness into social life by abolish- The draperies which fed the furtive glances of urient curiosity, an tion symbolical of a purer and saner ove this it has the consciousness all in all a sounder jud morality. It t the generations which it has already affected on est of truth way which has influenced all the arts, all the social re onships, and headed toward influencing the courts and the lawmakers, always last stronghold of hypocrisy and falsehood. This accumulating ad- e took its rise with the scientist and the poet, using the word poet to race all creators with words; and to the artists who are the first to be ative to the imitative, the spurious, the outworn, and that which is onger lifegiving.

On the other hand, the least redeeming feature of American life is ndifference to liberty, its meek and complacent submission to despotic and tyrannous regimentations, to economic strangulations, to the of degrading and exhausting conditions. In a word, the thing that erica should be most ashamed of is the assault that it has made on an freedom at home and abroad, and the lack of spirit that has ac- panied its brazen approach and success.

eventing the Many Excesses and Abuses in Intercollegiate Contests

By GEN. PALMER E. PIERCE, President N. C. A. A.

A careful reading of the reports of the eight district representatives the year indicates that the colleges in general realize the advis- lity of forming local organizations of athletically related educational titutions for the purpose of controlling and administering intercol- iate sports. Many additional local leagues have been formed and some the larger ones have been broken up into smaller and more closely ted bodies in order to secure better administration and solution of ir mutual problems.

It is believed that this process will go on until finally the colleges the United States will all be combined into small business-like organ- tions capable of preventing the many excesses and abuses in intercol- iate contests that are bound to exist otherwise.

The history of the 1925 football season, with its unusual exploitation college football stars and the successful attempts of promoters of pro- sional football to persuade not only college but also high school athletes play the professional game, makes evident the necessity of concerted d strenuous efforts on the part of educational institutions in order that e chief purpose of their existence may not be forgotten, and in order that hletic activities may be given, and held to, their proper place in the ucational program of the youth of our land.

The First Duty of Management Is to Keep the Tools in Shape"

By HENRY FORD, in System.

We have been learning a deal about a great many things this last arter-century, but principally to manage men, machinery, transporta- on, and to manage the application of processes and things which we ad known about for a long time, but had never brought together into a ngle unit.

We still waste more than we use. We waste men, we waste materials, e waste everything, and consequently we have to work too hard and too ng to accomplish what in the end amounts to very little. But at least e are learning that we cannot get anywhere without the kind of manage- ent which extends from the smallest detail to the whole purpose of hat you are about.

The first duty of management, in our way of thinking, is a very imple one, the importance of which is not always realized—it is to keep he tools in shape. By the tools, we mean more than the machines them- elves—we mean the entire plant and everything pertaining to it.

The Necessity for Federal Participation in Highway Construction

By T. H. MAC DONALD, U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

The total cost of the 11,328 miles added to the national road sys- em in the fiscal year of 1925 was $242,937,488, of which the govern- ent appropriated from federal-aid funds $111,304,737.

In the sparsely settled states of the West the federal participation s a vital necessity and a definite obligation. The sections of the federal- aid system in these states partake more of the character of interstate or national roads than of roads for local traffic. The mileage to be im- proved is so great that without the federal contribution the work could not be done in a generation; and to this reason there is added the still more compelling one that is involved in the ownership of vast areas of lands by the United States which are not taxable by the states.

The necessity for federal participation in highway construction does not lie alone in the Far West, nor even in the Middle West and South. It is even more essential that a continuous and adequate system of highways be built in the more populous sections of the East.

"The Aspiration of Dumb and Common People After Beauty"

By THEODATE GEOFFREY, in the Forum.

I object to Elizabeth Robins Pennell's statement that "the world was a more profitable, more civilized, safer place to live in before the blessings of education, in being scattered broadcast, turned into evils."

And are not these devices to which Mrs. Pennell takes exception merely experiments in the racial search after that individual expression of universal beauty which in the last analysis is the end of "culture"? The radio, the movie, the phonograph, are they not the aspiration of dumb and common people after the beauty of sound and art and drama that to the gifted few are the unsought, undeserved gift of fortune?

Some unknown power endowed Paderewski's fingers with nimble genius; I have ten fingers but no genius. Is that my fault? And am I therefore debarred forever from hearing a Chopin Nocturne? Why is it "vulgar" of me to be humbly satisfied with a pianola since musical genius was denied me?

ANCIENT CLOCK IS LEMOORE HEIRLOOM

An incient clock, with works made of wood, and which gave continuous service for eighty-eight years, has become the property of Mrs. W. P. Byron of Lemoore, Kings county. It is in almost perfect condition after an existence of 114 years. The clock was made by Chauncey Boardman and Joseph Wells in Bristol, Conn., and was purchased in 1812 by Harvey Harris of Hooperstown, New York, great, great grandfather of Mrs. Byron. The clock has been in the family since that date and was in constant use until 1900. The works, with the exception of the escape wheel and the bell and hammer, are of carved wood. On the back of the dial panel are notations of its having been cleaned in 1851, 1869 and 1871.

"Grape juice from a 50-year-old vineyard" is the enticing announcement that greets the traveler on the San Diego-Imperial valley highway as he passes through the quaint little mountain town of Alpine, thirty miles east of San Diego. And it is an appeal that has enabled H. L. Flegal, Alpine vineyardist and proprietor of the Monte Vino winery, to do a "land office" business in the unfermented juice of the grape ever since prohibition forced him to discontinue a successful business in winemaking at the scene of the same venerable planting.

Growth of world commerce of the Pacific coast was depicted to the Foreign Trade club by Captain Robert Dollar and Professor N. J. Silbering of the economics department of the University of California. In an address in San Francisco at the weekly luncheon in the Commercial club, Captain Dollar traced the growth of the Pacific coast during the forty years he has been here, and predicted that if the same pace is maintained for the next two score years the population and business of the region will be almost inconceivable.

Farmers throughout California have received with genuine pleasure the decision of the California railroad commission to the effect that it has no jurisdiction over "on call" trucking lines, according to President Earle B. Houghton of the California Farm Bureau federation. "It will mean the saving of millions of dollars annually to the farmers of this state," said this Tulare county man, who has just taken over the duties of state leader of the organization.

Just at the time when most home folks believed the oil prospects for Tulare county had been given up by operators, J. A. McDonald of Los Angeles, who has been operating quietly for a large syndicate, filed leases covering 2,000 acres in one block in the Tipton district, a new prospective field, and promises to begin operations within a very few weeks. He has kept the operations quiet pending the securing of leases covering up to 2,000 acres in one block.

Exeter, Tulare county, with a population estimated at nearly 3,000 persons, has had a gradual, steady growth and development, with no enthusiastic booms and corresponding periods of inactivity and today it is considered one of the most substantial communities of the county. HOW AURORA POST GOT NEW MEMBERS

"The biggest check in the world" was signed recently by Mayor Charles H. Greene of Aurora, Ill., in paying his dues to Roosevelt-Aurora post of the American Legion for 1926.

Equipped with a 4-foot pencil, Mayor Greene affixed his signature to a giant check measuring 24 feet long and 10 feet high. The check was signed in front of the city hall of Aurora before a large crowd, after which it was rolled up placed on a military caisson and conveyed to the bank where it was cashed. A parade, including the high-school band, soldiers, Legionnaires, and city officials, followed the check on its triumphal ride to the bank.

The event marked the opening of a phenomenally successful and unique membership campaign in which novel stunts and methods were the rule.

To locate prospects for the Legion the newspapers printed as complete a list of Aurora ex-service men as could be gathered and headed the list with a coupon to be clipped, on which was printed: "To Unknown Soldiers of Aurora—if you are not on the following list, sign your name and address and mail to the Legion Survey Committee." Nearly two complete pages of valuable newspaper space were given to the printing of the long list of known service men in the effort to locate the "unknowns."

The churches of the city co-operated with the Legion in locating "unknown soldiers." More than 1,000 undiscovered former service men were revealed to the membership committee through the agency of the churches.

Preceding these steps, a telephone campaign was conducted in which 15 girls called every residence in the city in an effective effort to locate veterans.

Prospects who were not signed the first day were sent telegrams which were delivered by 30 boy scouts. Thus impressed by the urgency of the matter, and weakened by the "rush act," prospects signed on the spot.

An "Off-to-Paris Night" was a unique and much applauded feature of the campaign. A large street car float representing the Leviathan, with a full passenger list Paris bound, "sailed" through the streets of Aurora and anchored at the town armory, which for the occasion was designated as "Paris." There the Legionnaires disembarked and made merry in true Parisian style, regaling with a dance, girly-girly show and review.

A mutt dog parade through the main streets for the kids of the town with cash prizes for winners, was a stunt that put the words "American Legion" on all lips. The Forty and Eight, honor organization of the Legion, also put on their fun-making stunts in connection with their initiation ceremonies during the campaign.

Two Girls and One Boy Legion Essay Winners

Two girls and a boy were declared to be national winners in the annual essay contest conducted by the national Americanism commission of the American Legion for 1924-25.

Miss Elizabeth Shankland of Watseka, Ill., took first place among the 200,000 and more essayists who entered the competition. She won a scholarship of $750 to be used in her further education. She plans to take a course in music at Northwestern university. She has been teaching piano since she was twelve years old.

Second place, with a scholarship of $500, was won by Miss Gertrude Carter Stockard, whose home is on a 240-acre farm at the top of one of the most beautiful hills in the Ozarks, a mile and a half above the little village of Mountainburg, Ark. She has never attended school a day in her life.

Her mother, who was for fifteen years a teacher in the schools of Eureka Springs and Fort Smith, Ark., directed her sole instruction. She has been driving in to Fort Smith in the family car once a week, when the roads are not too muddy, to study music at one of the best studios in the Southwest. She plans to continue her music at the School of Applied Arts in New York city, while she works on the bachelor of arts and bachelor of education degrees at Columbia university.

Earle A. Tompkins, now a freshman at Massachusetts Agricultural college, won the third prize of $250. His home is at Easthampton, Mass. He plans a business career.

The essays dealt with reasons why the Legion, as an organization of World war veterans, is concerned with upholding and defending the Constitution of the United States, as Legionnaires by their constitution are pledged to do.

RED CROSS VOLUNTEER SERVICE

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge has accepted an honorary vice-chairmanship of the National Committee on Red Cross Volunteer Service, together with Mrs. Dawes, wife of the vice-president, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. William H. Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wives of three former presidents, according to information received by the chairman of the San Mateo County Red Cross Chapter.

This is the first time in the history of the United States the wives of the president and vice-president together with the wives of three former presidents have become officers of the same organization.

Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Dawes, together with the wives of the former presidents, in their letters of acceptance to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, committee chairman and volunteer secretary of the National Red Cross, expressed a personal interest in Red Cross work.

Mrs. Coolidge said she had always been very much interested in this work, and conveyed her wishes for an ever-increasing service.

Mrs. Roosevelt, after declaring her willingness to serve, added: "It would be quite impossible to refuse."

Mrs. Wilson said: "I need not assure you of my deep interest in the Red Cross; it has been my custom to decline honorary committee membership, but I feel I will be proud to have my name associated in this mission for humanity."

The volunteer work of the Red Cross, over which the committee has supervision, is done by women throughout the United States. It includes, among other services, the making of garments for use in time of disasters; preparing surgical dressings; making Christmas bags for American soldiers in insular possessions and foreign territory, and transcribing books into Braille for the use of the blind.

Probably a lot of senators are trying to think up omething nice to give Mr. Dawes for Christmas. Also, probably not.

SERVICE OF "FOURTH ESTATE"

To the fact that the newspapers of this country are now cordially enlisted in the war against fire waste, there is abundant testimony of the directest kind. Yet indirect proof of a changed attitude also is not wanting. This can be found, for instance, in the growing frequency with which the great metropolitan journals, in reporting an outbreak, have been at pains to nose out the cause. Over the past five years, especially, this tendency to discover and make known in every case the origin of the flames, has been apparent to those who are engaged in opening up the road towards fire safety. It has become a helpful beam of light thrown upon a way illuminated by far too few rays of hope.

Repeated revelation of cause and effect cannot fail in time to stamp upon the public mind the truth, that every blaze has its source, that this source is usually avoidable; and that fire is a stroke of unlucky fate, mysterious and inescapable, almost never.

After a busy life, her energies centered entirely on the factory she owns, a middle-aged woman permits herself to fall in love with a man half her age. Pirate Who Became a Judge

IT IS difficult to characterize the anomalous career of the pirate known as Captain Cobham of Poole in Dorsetshire. Perhaps "cherchez la femme" would be one way to do it, for back of most of the deviltries of the pirate leader appears the sinister influence of Maria Cobham, one of the most notorious of women pirates, and certainly the most bloodthirsty. But the full of the blame for Cobham's cruelties can be laid to the tigerish Maria. She was well drilled in infamy before he took her aboard his ship to become his partner in crime, and there was but little he could learn from her. She had started young. At the age of eighteen he was a notorious ladies' man and accomplished smuggler. On one occasion he landed a cargo of 10,000 gallons of French brandy at Poole after successfully evading the king's revenue boats which were attempting to put a stop to the smuggling. A little later, however, his boat was captured and this so annoyed the young smuggler that he bought a cutter at Bridgport, placed an armament of 14 guns upon her and, collecting a choice crew of cutthroats, set "out upon account."

His first exploit in piracy was an unusually daring and successful one. Off the Mersey he intercepted a big East India merchantman, boarded her and made the crew prisoners. From the ship he took more than 40,000 pounds; then he scuttled the ship and grimly watched the crew drown. Next he put in at Plymouth and it was there that he met Maria who was willing enough to accept his invitation to come aboard with him and make a living by robbery on the high seas. By this time his fame had spread so that the English channel became too dangerous for his operations. So he sailed across the Atlantic and lay in wait for ships between Cape Breton and Prince Edward isle. He took several prizes and invariably disposed of the crews in some heartless manner. On one occasion he sewed up the unfortunate sailors in sacks and ordered his villains to toss them overboard.

Eventually Cobham decided to retire from piracy, but Maria would have none of it, for he had not yet secured enough wealth to satisfy her. So he reluctantly continued his career until he had gathered together a considerable fortune. Then he purchased a large estate near Havre, and after one final fling at the trade settled down to a peaceful retirement. He not only settled down but became eminently respectable, and to cap the climax of his strange career was made a magistrate and presided at the county courts. When he died at an advanced age, he left many descendants who, we are assured by one historian, "were moving in the first grade at Havre!"

Most Notorious Woman Pirate

WHEN the "damsel Maria" came aboard the ship of Captain Cobham, the noted pirate of the English channel, there were murmurs of discontent among the crew. But the freebooters soon quit their grumbling for they found that Maria was a distinct addition to any aggregation of cutthroats. More than that, she was often a friend in need for them. Discipline on Captain Cobham's ship was severe. The slightest offense by any member of the crew was sufficient to give him a taste of the cat-o'-nine-tails and Captain Cobham was not famous for sparing the rod. But time after time, Maria used her influence with the captain to get an offending sailor excused for some dereliction or his punishment lessened and her popularity grew apace.

She won their admiration, too, for among a band where cruelty was a virtue she demonstrated unusual capability for cold-blooded ferocity. On one occasion she plunged her own little dirk into the heart of a Liverpool captain whose ship had fallen a victim to the pirates and on another it was her whim to have a captain and his two mates tied up to the windlass, whereupon she coolly shot them with her pistol.

When Captain Cobham wished to retire she urged him on to continue his piracies, for she had set her heart upon his buying her beautiful Mapleton hall, near Poole, where she had visions of ruling as a grand lady. At last, however, the captain had made enough of a fortune to satisfy her and she agreed to his retirement. One final act of Maria's heartlessness preceded their retirement. Cobham had captured an East India merchantman and carried the crew aboard his ship in irons. Maria put poison in their food. "The dogs are crowding our ship," she told the captain.

After Cobham and his Maria had bought an estate near Havre and settled down they kept a little pleasure yacht in a private harbor on the estate. One day he and Maria went out on a fishing expedition and came upon a brig becalmed near by. Cobham and his crew went on board to visit the captain of the merchantman. When they saw evidences of a rich cargo the old pirate spirit surged up in their hearts. Cobham shot the captain and Maria and his crew quickly disposed of the remainder. Although Cobham settled down to a quiet life and became a magistrate, Maria could not endure such a life and she ended it

GOOD ADVICE ON CARING FOR CAR

Preventive for Every Ill That Cold Weather Brings to Driver.

There is a preventive for every ill that cold weather brings to automobiles. Unfortunately, many owners do not realize that by taking ordinary care of their cars, they can save much trouble and expense.

One of the greatest inconveniences is found in battery failure due to cold. This is caused by failure to prepare the battery for the extra load that zero weather is bound to put on it. The battery should be kept fully charged and filled with water. After filling, the engine should be run for an hour or so before being left out in the cold to insure the acid and water becoming thoroughly mixed. Otherwise there is a chance of the fresh water remaining on top and freezing. A weekly inspection of the battery in winter is not too much. The charging rate should be increased slightly to compensate for the extra load.

Lightens Battery Work.

The work of the battery can be lightened by using any of the winter gasoline, marketed by most oil companies. These fuels start easier than the ordinary gas used in the summer. The oil should be changed more frequently than in warm weather, to prevent crankcase dilution. This evil is caused by the sweating of a cold engine, which allows moisture to gather inside the cylinders and drain into the oil. Dilution is caused also by too free use of the choke, which shoots raw gasoline into the cylinders. This gasoline finds its way into the crankcase and further thins the oil. If too much water forms in the oil reservoir, it remains at the bottom of the crankcase where the pump is located, and may freeze, stalling the oiling system and resulting in serious damage to the engine.

Anti-Freeze Mixtures.

The anti-freeze mixture in the radiator should be kept at the proper proportions to prevent freezing. The solution drains away or is lost from various causes, and must be renewed at regular intervals.

The experience of the service station should be utilized by every owner in preparing his car for cold weather driving. The lubrication in the transmission should be lightened, the carburetor should be adjusted, the engine oil should be changed and possibly a lighter grade used. These few precautions will keep the car operating at its highest efficiency during cold weather. The wise motorist will attend to these things.

Cracks Permit Current Leakage in Spark Plug

The most common trouble with spark plugs is caused by cracked insulators, which then allow of current leakage, causing a poor spark or none at all at the gap. Often one cannot tell by examining the outside whether the insulator is cracked, because the trouble may be in the hidden portion. The only safe way is either to dismantle the plug if it is not of the one-piece type, or test it by laying it on the cylinder head with the plug cable attached. Then by cranking the engine, the gap may be watched for a good spark. Cracks, except hidden ones, may at once be noticed if the engine is operating in a dark area; sparks will be seen on the outside of the insulator.

Cranked Car With Wheel Helps in an Emergency

The real test of motoring qualifications comes with the unexpected situations. Recently, observes a writer in the Scientific American, an owner driver stalled his engine on a busy New York street crossing. When he kicked his starting motor pedal the engine cranking mechanism failed to operate, due to a run-down storage battery. The frantic search that followed failed to disclose a hand starting crank in the tool box or under the seat. In disgust the traffic officer helped to push the crippled machine to the curb.

Just then a young man stepped out of the crowd and offered his assistance.

"If your engine is all right," he suggested, "I think I can start it for you."

"Go ahead if you can," urged the owner dubiously.

Picking up a jack the young man raised one rear wheel from the ground and threw high gear into engagement. Then he turned the jacked-up wheel in a forward direction, being careful to pull up and lean away from the car. In an instant the motor was humming, and, after throwing the gears into neutral position and removing the jack, the friend in need smiled his appreciation of the owner's copious thanks and went his way.

It was a simple plan, as most successful mechanical adaptations are when demonstrated.

Gain Access to Ignition Coils by a Ventila

Some inclosed cars require the removal of the coil-box and the detaching of the wiring in order to remove the coils from the box to replace ignition points or for truing these up.

To avoid the work necessary to remove the coils, a rectangular opening in the cowl over the coil-box will

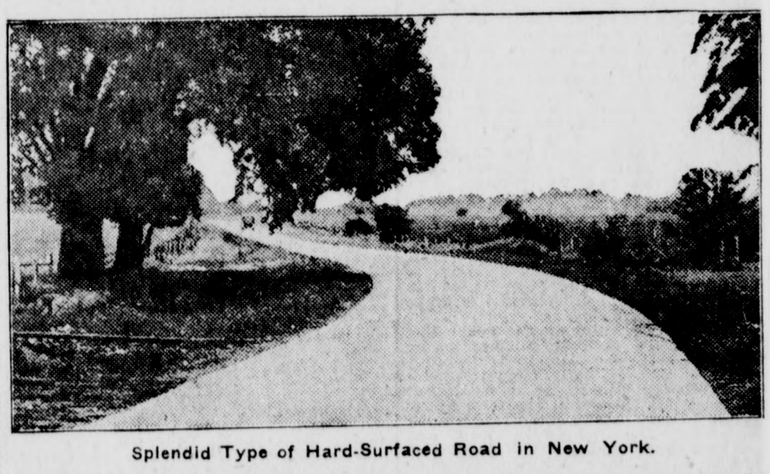
The illustration shows the details of the hinged cover, which is also useful for giving access to coils and ventilation on converted Ford speedsters using a low cowl extending rearward. —G. A. Luers.

REDUCE APPALLING NUMBER OF FATALITIES



Splendid Type of Hard-Surfaced Road in New York.

More careful driving and the elimination of railroad crossings will lessen the appalling number of fatalities due to motor accidents, is the opinion of B. H. Wait, formerly of the New York state highways department and an authority on highway construction. He also believes it is now necessary in the designing of roads to build them wider, do away with sharp curves, high crowns, and use a material which will give a nonskid surface.

"Skidding," continued Mr. Wait, "is the cause of many of the serious accidents, and while some of these accidents are caused primarily by careless driving, the innocent traveler, who gets hit, can be protected to a great extent if the pavement has a low crown and a nonskid surface.

"Highway engineers, in general, now realize the advantages of such a type of pavement and are now building quite extensively of reinforced concrete. This gives them a gritty surface on which the automobile tires obtain great resistance in skidding, by water lying on its surface, can be built with a lower crown than most of the other types of road construction.

"By the use of concrete the necessity for oiling and covering is eliminated, which does away with many accidents as well as damage and depreciation on cars.

"When we consider," continued Mr Wait, "that over 11,000 lives were lost last year, enough to populate a small city, it is apparent that drastic measures are immediately necessary and I am sure that the public in the future will be protected by the highway engineers of the country, as far as possible, by the building of wider and better-class pavements.

"At the same time it will be necessary for the public to interest itself in providing money for the elimination of railroad crossings, for the building of sidewalks in suburban communities so that school children will not have to walk on the roadways, and in taking measures to curb the careless driving."

And the day arrived when he took the only train that was not on the girl's itinerary. He had to be back in the city next day and had at last abandoned hope. The glorious girl would have to be some other man's wife. Fate had played against him.

Crawford was a bit slow getting off the train at his home city and was the last to get a taxi.

As he drew up to the familiar gate on Second avenue, he was hardly conscious that a second taxi had immediately preceded his.

The front door was still ajar when he bounded onto the porch and plenty of feminine chatter greeted him. Apparently someone had unexpectedly arrived and the event was joyfully received.

He popped his head through the door to see his pet sister and someone in a most familiar suit, clasped in each other's arms.

"What, ho!" laughed Crawford, "not a word of welcome to her brother." He stood by not quite believing his own senses.

"Oh, Dicky, I was so excited at seeing Joyce—" she turned then and gave him a sisterly hug and kiss, "that I forgot that you were to be on the same train that brought her. You've heard me speak often of Joyce Kimble—well, this is she—Joyce, this is Dick."

Of course brother Dick nearly passed out during that moment when the girl's hand lay well within his own and the curiously glowing eyes gave him a complete glance, but he managed to make a show of common sense.

"I hope she has come to make a long stay," he said calmly to sister Jane. "I fancy this chum of yours already. Do you know," he added turning directly to Joyce, "I believe I saw you once in a Chinese restaurant in New York. Were you perchance—?"

"And I don't know whether you have a thousand doubles," she said demurely, "or perchance I merely fancy that I saw you in every train, hotel—"

"I'll just go and see that everything's all right," put in sister Jane.

"Everything's all right already," said Dick with a most deliberate look at Joyce, who blushed in a most satisfactory way.

Sport Immortals for Hall of Fame

Here are pictured four of the immortals of the world of sport, who are to be the first to be honored in the nave of the cathedral of St. John the Divine. At the top on the left is Walter Camp; in the center Christy Mathewson, and on the right is Robert Wrenn, a star at Harvard and former tennis champion. Below on the right is Hobey Baker, Princeton athletic star.

Helen Wills in Europe

Photograph shows Miss Helen Wills, the youthful singles tennis champion of the United States, as she appeared in New York en route to Europe, where she will engage in many tennis matches, leading up to the Wimbledon ...is championship in the spring. She is expected to meet Suzanne Lenglen at Nice.

Great Success of Harry Cooper as Golf Teacher

The golfing career of young Harry Cooper, who captured a $3,500 prize in the recent tournament at Los Angeles, has been one of triumphs since he won his first "real" prize at the age of fourteen.

Cooper, now twenty-one, took up the ancient game when he was three years old, his father, Sid J. Cooper maintains and has been chasing golf balls ever since, achieving some notable triumphs in his more mature years.

When fourteen Cooper won a cup offered by the Golfers' Magazine. After that his career was chosen and he threw his optimistic youth into the ranks of more seasoned mashie manipulators with surprising results at times. He took first honors at the state tournament at Galveston in 1923, and again at San Antonio in 1924. He emerged third in the Southwide competition at Hot Springs the same year, and was runner-up in the Texas state ...urney last year.

Among the other amazing accomplishments of the youngster, who either chews, drinks nor smokes, is the scoring of a 60 on the Tennison Country club course, Dallas, last year, the lowest mark ever registered on the course, by either local golfers or national celebrities.

Seeking New Names for Shots in Tennis Game

"Lob," "smash" and "drive," as applied to tennis, are three words the translation of which into French has stumped the French sporting writers in a campaign to eliminate the English vocabulary from their articles on sport events.

The best they have been able to find is "chandelle" for lob, "coup de longuer" for drive and "coup ecrase" for smash.

Jean Samazeuilh, former champion of France at tennis, takes exception to the accuracy and practicability of the translation, and in an article in a sports weekly asks the players to ignore the scribes, and especially to execute the shots well on the courts, let the writers call them what they wish.

Profits Are Large

In the old days minor league clubs figured they were doing mighty well if they broke even on the season. Yet the old Fall River club of the New England league actually declared a 100 per cent dividend for the 1903 season, a positive enough declaration that baseball paid fairly well even in those days when 25 cents was the bleacher law and 50 cents guaranteed a seat in the wooden pavilion.

Umpires Ride in Taxicabs

Umpires in the Pacific Coast league will ride in taxicabs from the trains to hotels and from the hotels to the trains next year, according to Harry A. Williams, president of the Coast league.

"The umpires have to carry so much baggage that I have decided to allow them taxicab expenses next season," says Williams. "You know that an umpire hasn't many friends."

Started in 1903

The 1925 world series was the twenty-second of the annual struggles for baseball supremacy between the pennant winners of the National and American leagues. The first of these series was played back in 1903, when the Boston Red Sox defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates by five games to three. With the exception of 1904 the series has been played annually

MANAGER HARRIS WILL STAND PAT

Seeks Only Outfielder to Complete His Team.

Substantially the same team that won the American league pennant last season again will take the field for the Washington Americans this year.

Aside from the possible retirement of Infielder Everett Scott and Allen Russell, relief pitcher, and the possibility of the trading of outfielders Leibold and Veach, no changes have been forecast.

Manager Stanley Harris, two-year manager with two league pennants and a world series victory to his credit, intends to keep his infield intact along with his 1925 catching staff, but he would like to have a capable outfielder to work between Goslin and Rice.

The infield combination of Judge, Harris, Peckinpaugh and Bluege, which for two successive seasons, has excelled all others in double plays, will start the season. Buddy Myer, youthful infielder obtained from New Orleans, is slated to be Peck's understudy.

Indications are that Johnson, Coveleskie, and Ruether, who together won 56 games last season, will form the backbone of the pitching staff again.

Marbarry, relief hurler, who participated in 55 contests last season, although he made no starts, again is destined for the rescue assignment.

Harris wants one more experienced pitcher. He has looked with covetous eyes upon Hoyt of the Yankees, Ehmke of the Red Sox and Bush of the Browns. Alex Ferguson is expected to qualify for a regular pitching assignment, while Lefty Thomas, Harry Kelly and Win Ballou, Southern association recruits are likely prospects.

Tex Jeanes, erstwhile Southern association gardener, is the most likely candidate for the third outfield assignment, but Veach and Leibold, if they remain on the roster, will receive consideration. It is probable that Joe Harris will be retained as relief man for Judge at first base. Shirley and McGee, recruits, will receive tryouts at the post. Myer and Stuffy Stewart, another Southern association product, complete the list of infielder reserves.

The catching staff with Ruel getting first call and Severeid and Tate his assistant, remain the same.

Illinois Does Not Want Grange's Famous Jersey

The story that the blue jersey with "Red" Grange's famous "77" on the back, was to be preserved at the University of Illinois trophy room, was declared untrue by Matt Bullock, football trainer. He disclosed that the famous sweater had been given to Grange along with the rest of his football outfit, just after the Wheaton iceman's last college game. Illinois traditions, Bullocks says, have always opposed the display of apparel worn by noted athletes, and no serious consideration ever was given to the suggestion that the famous "77" sweater be preserved by the university. Instead, according to custom, it was given to Grange, and no other "77" will be used on an Illinois football team.

Diagram Showing How to Construct Simple Crystal Set That Gives Results.

The receiver about to be described can be constructed with very little expense.

The panel is a piece of half-inch wood, hard rubber or bakelite. The subbase is made of wood. The panel can be any size. We suggest seven inches by nine inches as a convenient one. The subbase is attached to the panel by means of No. 6 wood screws one inch long.

The coil is wound on a cardboard tube four inches in diameter and four inches long. Get one-quarter pound of 22 d. c. c. magnet wire.

The Winding.

Start the winding and wind on one turn. Make a loop in the wire—a loop about one inch long—then wind on another turn and make another loop the same length. Continue winding on single turns and taking out loops until ten turns have been wound. After this wind on ten turns, make a loop, wind on ten turns more, make another loop, and repeat the process.

Continue until a total of 60 turns have been wound on the tube. Solder leads to the switch points long enough to reach from the left-hand switch to the "units" taps. Also solder leads to switch points of the right-hand switch to reach the "tens" taps. In rotation solder these leads to the ends of the loops, after scraping the insulation from the end of the loop.

Ready to Tune In.

Connect the aerial to the post on the left and the ground to the post on the right at the top of the panel. Set the fine wire of the detector on the crystal and turn the "tens" switch until a station is heard.

To tune in better after the station is heard turn the "units" switch. This switch gives the necessary fine tuning. The most difficult operation in using this set is to find a sensitive point on the crystal. After this point is found, it is merely necessary to vary the two switches to tune in different stations. —Cleveland News.

Have Efficient Ground and Get Satisfaction

The importance of an efficient ground connection can hardly be overestimated. If there is a resistance to the passage of the high frequency oscillations in any part of the aerial or ground circuit, you find your receiver lacks pep, oscillates badly and tunes broadly. Pep or volume, stability and selectivity are three things every fan likes to have in his set, but a large number do not realize what a strong influence a good ground connection has in obtaining results.

It is worth while doing some experimenting with ground connections and you will probably find out some very interesting facts. One of the simplest and best methods to use in testing the efficiency of various ground connections is to tune in a station as far distant as possible, then reduce the volume until you can just hear the signal faintly. Make a note of the dial setting on the rheostat controlling the volume. Now disconnect the ground and try one of the others you have arranged and compare the volume. If you cannot hear any signal, wait a minute and make sure the station has not been fading. If after a short period you still do not hear a signal, then you know that this ground is not as efficient as the first one.

In addition to comparing the volume obtained with each possible ground, make a test for selectivity. It is surprising what a difference a good ground can make to the selectivity.

Try out each of the ground connections it is possible to arrange until you find one that gives better results than the others.

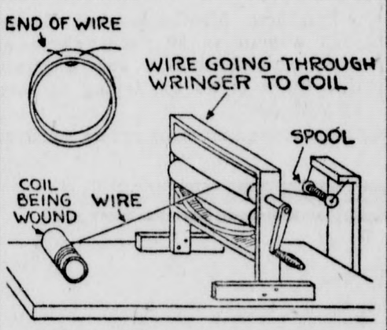
The most common type of ground used is a connection to a cold water pipe. This is generally O. K. if the pipe is thoroughly cleaned and a copper ground clamp used to make contact. It is generally impossible for the average man to solder a wire to a cold-water pipe, as the water must be turned off and a blow lamp used instead of a soldering iron. It is a good idea to remove the clamp every three or four months and examine the surface around the clamp to see that there is no corrosion.

If you are located where you can reach the ground within a reasonable distance from your receiver, it is possible at very small expense to install a real ground that will give maximum efficiency. Secure a length of copper pipe about one inch in diameter by four feet long and drill a number of holes in it. Fit a wooden plug into one end. For a ground wire use a length of solid insulated copper wire about 12 gauge. Clean the top of the pipe and about a foot of the ground wire, then wrap it around the top of the pipe and solder.

Dig a hole about five feet deep and one foot wide. Secure a bag of charcoal, six or seven pounds of salt and a few pounds of copper sulphate. Smash up the charcoal as small as possible, then mix charcoal, salt and copper sulphate together. Fill in the earth, packing the above mixture tightly around the pipe as you fill up the hole. This is very important. When you have filled up the hole take a hose and let water into pipe to thoroughly moisten the ground. This will give you a ground that is 100 per cent efficient.—Philadelphia Record.

Wringer May Be Used in Winding Tight Coil

The method shown in the drawing does not need much explanation. In one sketch is shown how to fasten the ends of the coils by putting two small holes in the tubing. Securing the wire this way prevents it from slipping.



How Clothes Wringer Is Used to Keep Wire Taut.

The other sketch shows use of a clothes wringer to keep the wire taut. When winding coils by hand, it is usually difficult to keep the wire at just the best tension from the spool.—Radio Digest.

Ohm and Megohm

The meaning of the terms ohm and megohm often is misinterpreted by the radio fan. However, they both are electrical units of resistance. The ohm is the fundamental unit and is the amount of opposition to the flow of an electric current which will cause the current to drop one volt when forced through at one ampere. As the term implies, a megohm is 1,000,000 ohms.

Indoor Aerials

An indoor antenna, even if only a single wire strung around the picture molding, will pick up many times more energy than will a loop unless the latter is extremely large.

Oxygened Furs

The furriers have a new trick. They cannot yet bring a dead squirrel to life, but they have put life into a dead fur by oxygenizing it. The favorite trimming on the new ribbed velvet coats from Paris is in oxygenized gray squirrel, blue otter and tiger. Oxygenized opossum takes an especially fiery sheen.

A BUSINESS NATION

has long been the fashion for ain writers and speakers to criti- the American people for their mercialism—their desire to make ney.

While it is true that the mere king of money is not a very high ition, it must be remembered that through our genius for business t we have been able to provide the ds for innumerable things worth ile, such as are not enjoyed by any er nation in the same degree.

Great sums devoted to educational, gious, charitable and artistic pur- es have been made possible ough successful business pursuits. ientific research, the advancement health measures, better homes, and e comforts and refinements of ilization generally have been due the ability of our people to acquire oney, and to their willingnes to end it for these things.

Most of the high-brow critics of siness obtained their education at lleges and universities endowned and ade possible by business men.

Business and money-making are not he end of our national ambition, but he means whereby civilization may e promoted and preserved.

OIL MEN EMPLOY HUGHES

Charles E. Hughes, former justice f the United States Supreme Court nd candidate for president in 1916, as been employed to represent the oil industry in hearings before the Federal Oil Conservation Board.

This board was appointed by President Coolidge in December, 1924, and is composed of members of his cabinet, Secretaries Work, Hoover, Wilbur and Davis. It is not a board of investigation, in the sense of assuming that there is crookedness in the oil industry. It is, as its name indicates, a board appointed to co-operate with the oil men in endeavoring to adopt conservation measures, such as better methods of production, refining and marketing, so as to avoid waste, in case wasteful methods are found to exist.

Hearings have been held and many facts have been presented to the board by a committee of eleven, composed of leaders in the oil industry. Further hearings will be held in Washington, and at these Mr. Hughes will assist the oil men in presenting the information desired by the government.

The oil industry has welcomed the inquiry and is aiding the president's board in getting at the facts, which when made public will, it is believed, offset much of the unfavorable criticism of the industry which has been heard since the Teapot Dome scandal came to light.

While the industry as a whole had no responsibility whatever for the Teapot Dome affair, it being merely a matter concerning certain individuals, that fact is not understood by the people at large.

Because of the high standing of the presidents' board and Mr. Hughes, it is believed that the conclusions reached will command the confidence of the people and give them a better understanding of this great industry.

OUT OF SWADDLING CLOTHES

Outside the realm of fancy there is nothing in modern science so amazing as the rapid development of radio.

It has jumped overnight from swaddling clothes into trousers, and in four years has passed through the field of adventure to a public utility of importance, and a social force that peremeates every part of our daily life.

Largely employed as a medium of entertainment in the beginning, it is now being used by the schools to educate, by the police in apprehension of criminals, for speedy location of missing people, weather reports, guidance of ships, etc.

It has enabled the president of the United States to address approximately all the people at one time. Internationl relations have been brought closer, and at home it has done much to create a sense of national solidarity, even in the most remote settlements.

President MacCracken of Vasser says woman is 50 years ahead of man, which confirms our suspicion that there is no use trying to keep up with her.

COMRADES

There is a comradeship of courage. This was illustrated the other day when Roald Amundsen paid a visit to Dr. Frederick A. Cook, convict No. 231,110, in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, hero of a half dozen daring expeditions into the frozen North and South, acclaimed one of the most intrepid explorers of all time, greeted his friend Cook, discredited and disgraced, convicted of fraud, serving a sentence of fourteen years.

One at the pinnacle of earthly fame, the other in the depths of degredation. Yet they met and chatted for an hour on the common level of comradeship. For they had been companions and friends in an elemental struggle such as tries men's souls, and they are comrades still.

Amundsen as mate and Cook as surgeon of the Belgica expedition in 1897-1899 braved the rigors of the Antarctic together for two years and were both decorated by the King of Belgium upon their return. That association developed a friendship that only death can sever.

Although Cook made false claims to having climbed Mt. McKinley, in spite of his untrue story of having discovered the North Pole, regardless of his conviction as a swindler—he had shared with Amundsen the hardships and privations of polar exploration. and his courage can not be discounted, even by his moral obliquity.

And true to the comradeship of courage, Amundsen is still his friend.

MORE PROHIBITION RUMORS

Press dispatches continue to indicate that the faith of General Andrews, dry czar, in his ability to satisfactorily enforce prohibition is weakening.

Several months ago it was stated in International News Service dispatches that the administration had decided to make an intensive drive for prohibition enforcement for a year, at the end of which time, in case success had not been attained, it would ask for a modification of the Volstead act.

Now the United Press declares that General Andrews will resign unless conditions can be improved. It states that he has given his administrators three months in which to get results or get out. These reports are quoted as coming from "officials close to General Andrews."

As to the actual results obtained since Andrews began his much-heralded campaign last fall, opinions differ. But it can not be denied that these results have been disapointing to those who sincerely desire to see prohibition enforced.

Of course, it may be contended that rumors of his probable resignation are "wet" propaganda, but it is hard to believe that a great press association would lend itself to that sort of thing. In any event, the problem of enforcement is far from being solved, and the high hopes placed in the ability of General Andrews to solve it have not been realized to any great extent, judging from present conditions.

FARM AND HOME LOANS

Twenty thousand ex-service men have applied to the Veterans' Welfare Board of the state for farm and home loans.

State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the Legion made known these facts following a conference with George Stout, secretary of the board, relative to the campaign for the passage of the $20,000,000 bond act which is to go on the November ballot this year to provide funds for a continuation of the work of the Veterans' Welfare Board.

"The new act under which all of the money advanced by the taxpayers is paid back with interest will provide homes and farms for more than 5,000 veterans," State Adjutant Fisk states.

"Twenty-five hundred veterans have already been provided for under the $10,000,000 act passed by an overwhelming vote in 1922, but this fund is practically exhausted at present," Fisk declares.

In outlining the work of the Veterans' Welfare Board, State Adjutant Fisk states:

"During the month of January, just past, $420,000 worth of property was acquired. The records of the board show that less than 5 per cent of the approximate 2,200 veteran property purchasers have ever been delinquent in their contract payments. As a result of this legislation, over 3,000 acres of land are under cultivation by California veterans. This acreage is divided into approximately 175 farms, located in the various farming communities of the state."

ENVIABLE WORKING CONDITION

Wage earners in this country earn more, live better, have more recreation and yet save more than workers of any other country. Including skilled and unskilled labor, the daily pay of the American workman is approximately that of the weekly pay of the English workman. Yet the demand is equal to the supply in this country, and in some crafts there is a shortage, while in England about one and one-half millions persons are maintained in idleness on the "dole" which the government contributes.

Unions in the United States have done much to raise the standards of pay and living conditions. These standards are now at a level where there should be little dissatisfaction, little excuse for labor disturbances and strikes.

It's great to have the privilege of living in this favored country of ours.

The old timers who wrote of "death in the cup" were true prophets, but they failed to get a hunch about the blindness that also lurks therein.

Latest press reports indicate that there is a spirited rivalry for the title of wettest city. Some person or another has suggested nearly all of them for that doubtful honor.

FASHIONABLE SILKS FOR SPRING; ARTFUL HATS IN SIMPLE LINES

WHO does not treasure the more a book, a bit of pottery, a vase or a picture if it be autographed? With what a feeling of satisfaction do we call attention to the author's or artist's signature. But where, you ask, is the connection between works of accredited art and spring silks? Just this—the best shops, this season, are showing a collection of American silk prints which have the unique distinction of being designed by several of our well known contemporary artists. Does it not seem in the range of possibilities that, ere long, women of fashion will be insisting that the silks they wear be autographed by the artists who designed them? Why not?

For instance, the striking silk of Artful along simple lines quite describes the present-day chapeau.

Most of the millinery story is told in color. Color irresistible! To repeat the list of lovely tones and tints which glorify new headgear, is like reciting a beautiful poem. If you doubt it, say the following aloud: Thistle blue, periwinkle, bois de rose, cyclamen, rose beige, pale tomato, shell pink, rose geranium, opal gray, mauve, chartreuse, peach, love-bird green, bleu de nil, absinthe, artichoke, lipstick, rouge and orchid. There! You have in part the range of color beautiful which plays so adorable a part in the early spring chapeau.

Next comes material which is very likely to be taffeta, for according to which the charming spring frock here pictured is styled, is designed by no less a personage than Neysa McMein, she of magazine cover fame. This gifted woman together with several of her contemporaries are making a candid effort to create for American women silk prints which are representative of true American atmosphere—a challenge to the traditional French domination in the field of textile art. Modernistic art is written all over this brilliant silk, which the designer declares was inspired by thoughts of Hollywood. Its confusion of vividly colored futuristic motifs so the Parisian idea, it is immensely important just now. If not taffeta, then one's hat is almost sure to be of belting ribbon in any of the exquisite pastel colorings. The newest of new sensations is the hand-crocheted hat of straw, made soft, supple and colorful, fitting the head as if molded to it. Satin and faille have their sponsors, too, and as to felts of soft colorings, they are in their glory at this very moment.

First color, then material and then, the crowning touch of genius is applied with a deft twist here, a pin thrust in aslant and presto! you have unconventionally grouped makes not only an arresting pattern, but constitutes a decoration which reflects something of the exotic nature of the American colony of film people.

Never was there promise more fair for the domination of gay print throughout the mode than at this very moment. Unusual design is the outstanding feature for silk this spring.

Large floral patterns are prominent. Exquisite chrysanthemums, large bunches of poppies and huge roses contribute their loveliness to silk design.

"Simplicity, thou art a jewel," seems to be the guiding thought among millinery designers this season before you hats flatteringly becoming, hats which proclaim smart style, hats, though they bespeak simplicity itself, lack not a certain dressy air.

The collection of early spring models shown in the picture include: at top, new high-crowned effect of quilted rose-beige taffeta with jeweled dagger; to right, soft opal-gray faille silk with whimsical crown; profile view of love-bird green silver-stitched taffeta bonnet type; to left above soft orchid felt with silver-bound, metal-stitched brim; final, latest vogue knit straw in artichoke green with fancy metal ribbon band.

A feller has not time for hate, out fishin',

He isn't thinkin' thoughts of pelf,
Or goods stacked high upon the shelf;
But he is always just himself—out fishin'.

FISH DISHES

Codfish when not to be obtained fresh is always in the market either dry or in brine. A pail of codfish will be a refuge in time of famine when meats are not at hand.

Codfish Timbal.—Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of grated onion, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, one and one-half cupfuls of flaked fish, one teaspoonful of crushed pimento, one beaten egg. Mix and pour into individual molds, set in hot water, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until firm. Turn out on a hot platter and serve with cheese and celery.

Fish Cakes.—Take two cupfuls of shredded codfish, two cupfuls of hot mashed potato, a few dashes of cayenne, one beaten egg, two tablespoonfuls each of butter and milk, one onion, one-half of a green pepper and one-fourth pound of salt pork. Try out the pork, remove the scraps, cook the pepper and onion in the fat for five minutes, remove them. Mix the fish, potato and pork scraps, stir in a beaten egg and shape in small cakes. Fry until brown and serve with water cress or onion salad.

For creamed codfish use a cupful of rich white sauce to half a cupful of shredded codfish. Serve with baked potatoes.

Codfish chowder has been given so many times that it hardly seems necessary to mention it, yet it is a popular dish. Fry a thick slice of salt pork cut into cubes, add three sliced onions, one-half dozen sliced potatoes, cover with boiling water and cook until the vegetables are tender. Then add half a pound of shredded codfish that has been parboiled, a quart of milk, salt and butter to season. Serve with a large milk cracker in each soup plate. A half pound of pork will not be too much for this amount of chowder.

Dutch Codfish.—Take two slices of diced bacon, try out and add four cupfuls of chopped cabbage and cook five minutes, stirring constantly; add one-fourth of a cupful of water and cook until the cabbage is tender, season to taste, add two cupfuls of cooked codfish, and when hot mound on a hot platter; dot with hard-cooked egg in slices and toast points for a garnish.

Winter Foods.

As cold weather is the most appetizing time for oysters let us serve them frequently.

Oysters Perfection.—For this dish take a shallow baking dish which will take all the oysters in one layer. Brush the dish with butter, spread out a pint of well-drained oysters, mixing them well with one-half cupful of chopped chives and cover carefully with one cupful of cracker crumbs well mixed with half a cupful of melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven until the crumbs are brown and the oysters cooked. Serve from the baking dish.

Baked Ham With Raisin Sauce.—Soak a ham overnight in cold water. In the morning scrub it thoroughly and put on to cook in enough boiling water to cover; add one cupful of vinegar and one cupful of brown sugar. Simmer for three hours, skimming off as much of the fat as possible. Let cool in the water. Remove the skin and add one cupful of cider and rub the ham well with one-half cupful of brown sugar, adding a few cloves stuck well into the fat. Baste and bake for two hours. Half an hour before serving time add one cupful of raisins. Thicken the sauce with a little corn starch mixed with water, if it seems too thin. Serve the ham on a hot platter, surrounded with spiced peaches or apples. Serve the sauce in a separate dish.

Sour Cabbage.—Chop fine one apple and one onion, add two tablespoonfuls of fat to a frying pan with the onion and apple and fry ten minutes. Add one-half of a medium-sized cabbage head shredded, and two cupfuls of boiling water. Simmer one and one-half hours, adding water as needed. When two-thirds done stir in one-half cupful of sugar and one-third cupful of vinegar. Season well and serve hot.

Honey Sandwiches.—Mix grated American or Cheddar cheese with honey to make a paste. Spread thin slices of bread with butter, then with the cheese, toast and serve hot.

The only way to train people to be normal is to begin with them young. It is no easy task that a mother has laid out for her, but it's hers, and no one can do it better than she.

BILLIE'S TRIP

Billie Brownie went on a trip to the zoo, and first of all he went to see the Tapirs, for he said he really had a lot of questions to answer back in Fairyland about Tapirs, and he thought he'd better have a talk with them first.

"Well," said one, "I am a Malay Tapir, meaning that I am from the Malay peninsula."

"I am a South American Tapir," said another, "meaning that I am from South America. But we are really cousins."

"The front half of my handsome body," said the Malay Tapir, "and my legs are dark, dark, dark brown, while the hind part of my body is white.

"I'm a beautiful mixture. I'm very smart and fashionable, for brown and white, or black and white, makes a very stylish combination.

"People never can decide whether I am black and white or brown and white. I let them fight it out among themselves."

"My color is of a beautiful brown, like mahogany," said the South American Tapir.

"When people see me they think how lovely it would be to have lots of furniture just my color.

"And I always keep myself looking well. Some people say I am like a seal—I am so shiny and smooth and well-fed looking, while others think I'm like an elephant.

"That is because of my long nose, which is so like an elephant's trunk. They say we are distant cousins of the elephants."

"We're not as big as elephants," said the Malay Tapir.

"Nor are we as small as seals," said the South American Tapir. "I have a great talent," he continued. "I can whistle. It's almost as fine as to be able to sing, I think.

"I came from the mountains, and I was mighty hard to find. But as long as they brought me here I don't mind, for I like it very much and am quite happy."

"Ah," said the Malay Tapir, "I miss the swimming I used to have.

"I miss the swamps and think of the nights I used to roam about.

"But there is one thing about the zoo I like. The leopard can't eat me here.

"And I used to be always in fear that the leopards would get me.

"I always traveled through the underbrush when danger was near, and my queer coloring would confuse animals so they would not see me.

"I love the food they give me here. I absolutely insist, though, that my potatoes should be boiled. I suppose you have heard that before.

"I mention it frequently."

"Well, I'm glad to be reminded of it again, as I'll be sure to tell when in Fairyland and Brownieland," said Billie Brownie.

"I won't eat raw potatoes, and I've trained them so well that they always give me nice boiled potatoes.

"Yes, and bread and clover and hay like the herbs I used to eat when I was wild."

"Ah, you're a fuss, and not nearly so friendly as I am," said the South American Tapir, as he wiggled his long, long nose.

But Billie Brownie was glad to have heard them talk, for there were a number of his friends in Fairyland and Brownieland who had missed hearing about the Tapirs, and they thought they were curious animals and wanted to hear about them.

So Billie went and found out all he could once more.

These were the conversations they had. He thanked the Tapirs politely then, made a low bow, put on his stocking cap and jumped in his airplane for home.

Competition for Parties

Draw on a large piece of paper an eyeless pig. Mark with a circle the spot where the eye should be. Spread this on the floor or hang it in some convenient place. Blindfold each child one by one, and, taking them a few yards away from the paper let them find their way to it and mark with a pencil where they imagine the eye should be. The child who gets nearest right wins.

Hole in Billy's Stocking

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed little Billy, "there's a hole in my stocking as big as a silver dollar!"

"Are you sure it's that large?" asked his mother.

"Well," was the reply, "it's as big as 90 cents, anyway."

Mary Pickford's "Through the Back Door" will be shown as the feature at the Daly Theatre next Sunday. This picture shows Mary Pickford in a child role which at the same time is a character part. The story is a combination of comedy and drama, punctured with many of those laughable pranks for which Little Mary is famous when portraying a pig-tailed kiddie. From the farms of Belgium to the mansions of Long Island the camera follows this clever little actress in "Through the Back Door." Mother love and the heart-hunger of a child all bound up in an intricate society drama, supply the emotional impulses of the play.

Question: I have a four-terminal variometer. I have a circuit showing a two-terminal one. How can I make the change? It tunes down to 350 meters. How can I lower this? B. S.

Answer: Join one rotor and one stator terminal. The two remaining terminals (a rotor and a stator) are the needed ones. Experiment and find which two terminals connected give the best volume. To lower the wave length, insert a fixed or variable condenser, about .0005 mfd. or .001 mfd., in parallel with the two terminals.

Question: Recently my five tube Neutrodyne has been losing volume. What is this due to? A. J.

Answer: Be sure all storage batteries are well charged. A hyrometer should read 1275 to 1300 on a charged battery. Test all dry batteries with a voltmeter (never an ammeter.) If they are below two-thirds of their rated voltage, discard them. They are useless and will make a great deal of noise when low. Have your tubes tested by a reliable dealer and purchase new ones for the ones which will not respond to reactivation. Try changing the tubes around in different sockets.

Question: What is your opinion of "bootleg" tubes? P. C.

Answer: That of every other person who has used them. They are punk, minus and N. G. They may be used for inserting in sockets for the first test of a newly assembled set. If they are blown out, the loss is slight. They may be used for low voltage rectifiers (connect the grid and plate together and use as the plate) with some success. Occasionally a good one is found. Only occasionally. Often they cause an excessive drain on the "A" battery. They become paralized easily and need reactivation often. Oftener they will not respond to the latter treatment. They are made of cheap and inferior materials. Good tubes are low priced. Pass your $2.50 across the counter without a sigh and get a good tube. They are seldom poor and will always be readily replaced if so. They respond to reactivation and need it seldom.
